Container village hosts Miami gallery

Art Positions, the 20 galleries and shipping containers assembled in Miami Beach's Collins Park, opened Wednesday night with an ice theme that featured white floors with black geometric designs and white foam sculptures that resembled ice formations. WPS1 from New York provided the trippy soundtrack.

Among dealers represented at the park: Wynwood's David Castillo Gallery.

Castillo, 34, exhibiting at Art Positions for the first time, said the show was going well. It features collages by Quisqueya Henríquez that use pieces of baseball players to illustrate stereotypes of Latin Americans. The collages use body parts — an arm or a leg, for example — to show strength and dexterity.

"In the first hour and 40 minutes, we sold one-fourth of the booth already," Castillo said.
