The organizers of Art Basel have announced the 283 galleries set to participate in this year's Miami Beach fair, slated to take place at the Miami Beach Convention Center December 6–8, with preview days December 4 and 5. Hailing from thirty-four countries and territories, the exhibiting galleries include thirty-two first-time participants, the most since 2008. The Americas are strongly represented, with nearly two thirds of participants coming from the United States,

Canada, Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Colombia, Guatemala, Peru, and Uruguay; countries appearing for the first time include Indonesia and Romania.

The show will be divided into several sections: Galleries, the main section; Nova, which features young galleries showing work created in the past three years by up to three artists; Positions, devoted to solo showcases of emerging galleries or artists; and Survey, which focuses on work created before 2000. This year's Meridians sector, which centers atypical projects, is being curated by Yasmil Raymond, until recently the director of Portikus and the rector of the Städelschule Academy of Fine Art, both in Frankfurt. The Kabinett section, focused on curated displays presented by galleries in a portion of their main booths, will return, as will the fair's Conversations program, organized this year for the first time by arts writer and educator Kimberly Bradley.

Following the introduction of a new minimum-size booth option meant to attract small and midsize galleries, twenty-five galleries will debut in the main section. "It was incredibly important that we carve out a more equitable path to participation for small and mid-sized galleries entering the main sector of this show, and the proof is in the extraordinary number of newcomers joining this edition," said Art Basel Miami Beach director Bridget Finn in a statement. Four galleries are making their debut at the Miami Beach fair and going straight into the main section. These are Seoul's Gallery Baton; Pearl Lam Galleries, based in Hong Kong and Shanghai; Leeahn Gallery, with outposts in Seoul and in Daegu, South Korea; and the San Francisco-based Gallery Wendi Norris. Among the returning galleries who are promoted for the first time from the Nova, Positions, or Survey sectors to the main section are Isla Flotante, Buenos Aires; Kampala, Uganda's Afriart Gallery, working jointly with Rele Gallery, which has outposts in Lagos, London, and Los Angeles; and Toronto's Daniel Faria Gallery.

Debuts in the Nova section include New York's Charles Moffett, showing a collaboration between Kim Dacres, who works with recycled tire rubber, and Melissa Joseph, who works with felt; and Shanghai's Gallery Vacancy, which will present works by Henry Curchod, Michael Ho, and Chen Ting-Jung addressing the ethereal quality of materials as it relates to the respective diasporic experiences embodied in their practices. New York-based gallery Gordon Robichaux debuts in Positions with a series of shrine works by Agosto Machado, while São Paulo's Carmo Johnson Projects enters the section with paintings by the Indigenous Huni Kuin collective MAHKU. First-timers in the Survey section include Singapore's Gajah Gallery, showing work by Indonesian artist I Gusti Ayu Kadek Murniasih; and Warsaw's Gunia Nowik Gallery, presenting photos dating from the 1970s through the '90s by Teresa Gierzyńska.
