

CULTURED

ART THIS WEEK IN CULTURE

These 11 Shows Will Be the Talk of Miami Art Week

This week and beyond, Miami's art scene is going full tilt, with a host of local mainstays and boundary-pushing newcomers imbuing the city with color, emotion, and intrigue—from José Parlá's triumphant return to Lucy Bull's hypnotic universes.

“Alien: A Survey of the Asian Diaspora”

Where: David Castillo Gallery

When: Dec. 3, 2024–Feb. 8, 2025

Why It's Worth a Look: Marketed as the first-ever exhibition in Miami to survey the Asian diaspora, “Alien” is a groundbreaking exploration of a continent's cultural impact in a globalized world. Curated by the artist Yesiyu Zhao, this show brings together the voices of over 20 AAPI artists, each using their practice to unravel the nuanced layers of alienation, identity, and belonging.

Know Before You Go: “Alien” digs into a diaspora's complex layers through postcolonial theory, cyberfeminism, and more. From intimate reflections on identity to bold depictions of displacement, each piece asks viewers to question the boundaries that we believe define us.